LETTER FROM THE EDITOR:

All,

"I've missed more than 9000 shots in my career. I've lost almost 300 games. 26 times, I've been trusted to take the game winning shot and missed. I've failed over and over and over again in my life. And that is why I succeed."

Michael Jordan

A few weeks ago I saw this quote on a friend's Weixin moments and it's been tumbling around my mind like a lone white sock in a dryer for a while now. I've gone online and looked up more of his quotes (which he has many) and most center on the idea of knowing your limits, setting goals and understanding that you are going to fail many times before you ever succeed.

The idea of falling down and getting back up is a center point in defining your path. Knowing that no matter how much you plan, how hard you work or the support you have behind you that failure is always an option. More than that failure is guaranteed in some aspect - but the bright side is that it doesn't matter. We have all failed in relationships, in careers, in money and a myriad of other things too vast to list - but it doesn't matter. It's not about how many times you fail or how large you fail it's about trying ONE MORE TIME.

The definition of insanity is doing the same thing over and over again expecting a different result, yet all of us have fallen into that situation. Failure has value, failure breeds potential; failure is important because if it's treated right there is no better teacher than failure. It can break us from a cycle of insanity and feeds us the drive and determination to grow beyond our preconceived limits.

Failure is not an option; it is a guarantee and that should give us comfort.

Look, I know that this is cliché, I know that beating a dead horse and the above statement hold a similar context - but what if it didn't? What if this was the first time you realized this? What if you read the quote at the top, blinked your eyes, looked up, and it sunk in, deeply.

How would that change your day, your career, your life?

Would you look back to examine your past failures with new perspective?

Would you look forward to release the tension of being scared to fail and thus try new things?

You know, I actually use sayings like the above to guide me in my life's actions, and while I will never be accused of being a mental giant I have come to realize that to NOT do something because of a fear of failure are the only regrets in life.

Sincerely,

The Editor-in-Chief

塞纳河法国餐厅介绍

塞纳河法国餐厅是一家豪华全景观法国餐厅，每年都会邀请法国米其林大厨定期来调餐，力求每一道菜都更臻完美。米其林可不是随便说说的，它是法国餐饮很高的荣誉，评审极其严格。塞纳河法国餐厅包括全景观的主用餐区，浪漫红酒吧、经典雪茄吧、豪华的VIP包间、钢琴演奏区等，可以同时接待二百人的正餐宴会或三百人的鸡尾酒会。走近塞纳河，首先感受到的是——礼遇。一层门口的迎宾周到而不殷勤，恭敬地把客人领入玫瑰花瓣装饰的电梯，一出电梯就会看见一整面火红的玫瑰花墙。随处可见的玫瑰或者百合，优雅地装饰在朱红色的沙发，金黄色的珠帘，精致的餐盘之间，每一个角落和细节都很法国。

巴黎海盐牛排：将新鲜的牛肉，涂上纯橄榄油，置于扒烤架上，热情的小火爆滋滋啦啦地烤，于是就有风情的菱形花纹；再抹上晶莹的粗粒海盐、黑胡椒，放入烤箱，于是就有诱人的扑鼻肉香~配上时令蔬菜、土豆和奶油蘑菇汁，好牛肉只需如此简单的处理，原汁原味才最出色！

鹅肝慕斯：向法国鹅肝中加入多种酒和香草（秘方哄不出来呀），腌制24小时后，打成特制的鹅肝酱，在特定的温度下烘制，就得到口感柔嫩的鹅肝慕斯。其精妙之处在于它入口即化、柔嫩细腻、唇齿留香、余味无穷的感觉，可以勾起味蕾的无限欲望。

塞纳河咖啡：来自意大利的国宝级咖啡LAVAZZA，是品味、芬芳、喜悦的化身。随点随磨，来体验一下LAVAZZA的浓郁、香醇，感受其深沉、平稳的气质。入口焦香味明显，口感平衡。

La Seine 塞纳河法国餐厅

Article By Jorge Cartaya and Estibaliz Puerta

They say one of the most important things about a good restaurant is its location, and La Seine couldn't have chosen a nicer spot. This high-end, classically inspired French restaurant is located on South Street with a great view of the Bell Tower and the huge Kai Yuan mall, a mere 30 seconds walk from the southeast underpass exit. The moment you step inside, you can feel the high class atmosphere, which is something that we think is rare and difficult to achieve in Xi'an. They have a great pianist and violinist playing relaxing, romantic music; the lighting is subtle and inviting; the waiters are well trained according to international standards. This place is the whole package.

We had the great pleasure of being treated to the Romantic Lover's set meal. This flowing plethora of beautiful creations included a creamy seafood soup starter, served at a perfect temperature; a refreshing shrimp and vegetable salad; an excellently nutty foie gras with buttery escargot and strawberry marmalade; a grilled medium-rare sirloin served with oysters au gratin; and a delicious chocolate sphere filled with mango ice cream, which is then lit on fire until the chocolate melts around it. Simply put, it was unbelievable.

The price tag, though hefty, was reflective of the quality of the cuisine, the environment and the service. This is fine dining, after all. We had rose petals on our table, a candlelight ambiance with a serenade, bottomless red wine that was light and flowery, and the whole set meal which blew our minds. We are well convinced that the 520 yuan for two was worth every last mao. There were other set meals that looked equally mouth-watering, with similar prices. Among the most attractive dishes were the cuttlefish cheese balls in lemon sauce, a grilled salmon topped with yoghurt sauce, the Provence seafood soup, a peppery beef tenderloin, rose-chocolate brownie cake, and the strawberry mousse. French classics like onion soup and crème brûlée were also present, along with gargantuan assortment of wines from France, Italy, Chile, Argentina, the US and Spain.

The experience as a whole almost felt as if we weren't in China, which is remarkable when you consider that all the staff and the chef are Chinese. Businessmen looking to impress their prospects would definitely do well to choose La Seine, as would couples looking for a start to a truly special night. The steep price tag can also work to your advantage, as you are almost sure to be in the company of other clients that also appreciate fine dining. We will definitely keep this place in mind the next time an anniversary comes along, as should anyone who enjoys French cuisine.

Pro: The experience will take you on a trip outside of China, leave you feeling refreshed and delighted, and will no doubt impress whomever you take with you

Con: The prices could burn a hole in some expats' pockets, especially teachers. Save it for a special night with a special person

HOOTERS 猫头鹰餐厅

Toto, We're Not in Kansas Anymore

Article By David Nestor

On Valentine's Day the new to Xi'an Hooters restaurant/bar opened for business. Located a stone's throw across the street from the Shangri La Hotel it's in central Gaoxin. I regret that I have never been to Hooters in the United States and now I have found out what I am missing as I can see myself coming here occasionally. The crowd on the night we went (a Sunday evening about 6pm) was three quarters full and as I ate my dinner the dining hall quickly filled to capacity.

Waitresses from Beijing, Shanghai and Chengdu were brought in to show the newly hired Xi'an staff what Hooter's is all about. If I didn't know I was in Xi'an I would have sworn I was in Los Angeles or Miami. The place was immaculate and featured a stage for the song and dance routines that the girls do periodically. They even have the latest gadgets to rush your order to the kitchen. Both expat and locals alike seemed to be enjoying themselves with many many pictures being taken with the smiling waitresses, who seemed friendly and patient while posing for countless photographs.

When it finally came time to order I was famished so I opted for the "Hooter's Burger" with grilled onion and jalapenos (Hey I lived in LA for 35 years), as well as an order of onion rings and curly fries. A friend of mine Mei Chen ordered a bowl of chili, Hawaiian flat bread; she proclaimed that Xianese folks would like it. My former student Panda from Weinan ordered a burrito with beans and rice which she thoroughly enjoyed.

All in all it was a fun evening with the table conversation and crowd watching blending well with the atmosphere of young men downing their towers of beer.

Pro: Almost all of the waitresses speak English; the fun and lively atmosphere is unique of all the restaurants I've been to in Xi'an

Con: It's fairly expensive meaning this wouldn't be a frequent dinner stop, so if you come with a group of friends be sure to go AA

猫头鹰餐厅介绍

HOOTERS, 一个传递快乐、营造派对气氛的美式餐厅! 极具运动感的美式氛围, 活力四射的Hooters Girl拉拉队员以及口味纯正的地道西餐和种类丰富的酒水饮料, 让她成为美国餐饮文化中的一个亮点。

Hooters的故事始于1983年4月1日, 六个热爱生活、喜爱美食的成功商人聚会时, 因为喜爱口味醇厚的水牛城炸鸡但却因为路途的不便无法得偿所愿, 于是突发奇想, 自己经营一家特别的餐厅, 既可供人们聚会又有啤酒和水牛城鸡翅。于是这六个没有任何餐厅经验的商人在佛罗里达一个叫作CLEARWATER的小镇海边开了一家用猫头鹰大大的眼睛作为特殊标识的主题餐厅, 在那里不仅有啤酒、鸡翅和精彩的体育赛事, 更有热情、充满欢乐的Hooters Girl餐厅拉拉队员。

“美食, 啤酒, 热力四射的Hooters Girl餐厅拉拉队员”, 这个永远不会过时的组合就是Hooters不变的理念。

Café D'orsay 奥赛咖啡吧

Article By Johnson Jiang

奥赛咖啡吧介绍

春天总是这么的美丽和受人欢迎，在中国，我们都习惯地叫她春姑娘，因为她带给我们的总是迷人的风景和愉悦的心情。

在这样景色诱人的季节里，没有理由不找一家咖啡或酒吧来度过慵懒的午后，而奥赛咖啡恰是一个不错的选择。

当我第一次听到奥赛咖啡的英文名称的时候我就很确定这一定和法国有着联系，果不其然，老板是一对从法国留学回来的情侣。他们将法国的浪漫生活延续到了西安。

这里充满了浓重的法国街头咖啡气息，主题色以绿色为主，装饰着各种各样的花朵和饰品，一楼有些偏小，但二楼绝对可以满足你的胃口，奢华的顶灯，欧式的油画，可爱的小植物和大气沙发把二层装扮得像一个标准的法式庄园内的大客厅。

当第一次看到菜单的时候，我强烈地怀疑了自己的英文，但仔细一看，那些字母居然都是法语，虚惊一场，还是专注于旁边的中文吧！

言归正传，咖啡、花茶和红酒是这里的特色，加上20种左右常见的鸡尾酒和个别几款啤酒，菜单还是简单而丰富的。

这里的甜点绝对可以点赞的，尤其是提拉米苏，是你不想错过的美味！！

优点: 优雅的环境和优质的单品

缺点: 地点偏远啦

我的推荐: 红酒配甜点

Spring is always so tremendously beautiful and warmly welcomed in Xi'an. In Chinese Spring is called a young girl because it brings us beautiful scenes and a wonderful mood.

Since spring is such a marvelous season, there's no reason that we shouldn't find a café or a bar to enjoy lazy afternoon sunshine. And Café D'orsay is a perfect place to have the fun and relax on a beautiful spring day.

The first time I heard the name France came to my mind directly and I wasn't wrong, after a few years' study in France, this lovely couple decided to continue their romantic lifestyle in Xi'an and opened the café.

From what I can tell, they did their best to make Café D'orsay a typical French street café. With mostly green and bright colors they decorated the interior with many flowers and souvenirs. The first floor is small and cozy while the upstairs is more open and spacious. Roof lights, european style oil paintings, cute plants and leather couches make the second floor feel like a stereo typical French living room.

I strongly doubted my English when I first saw the menu, I thought I needed to quit my job and go back to school but it turns out that the menu is in French and Chinese. Who!!!

Anyway they feature various coffees, imported teas and wine as main attractions with about 20 kinds of regular cocktails and a few beer options rounding out the menu.

Something I don't talk about much in bars but that I've discovered here is the dessert. It's seriously messing up my diet (Editor's Note: as far as we know Johnson has never been on a diet besides a disastrous Donuts and Cake diet), I mean they are really good and I personally recommend the Tiramisu. Above all for a sunny and relaxing Spring this is a place you don't want to miss.

Pro: Relaxing Environment with quality drinks and AMAZING desserts!

Con: It's a little bit far away

Johnson's Recommendation:

Timo Coffee Bar

Article By Eugene Matu

If you're ever looking for that fine balance between alcohol and caffeine to bookend your day look no further. Timo has an excellent selection of coffees, beers and cocktails.

The first floor has the baristas counter and a blackboard menu in both English and Chinese. They have all the usual variations of coffees but one that really stands out. The German black forest Mocha, and we all know when coffee and cocoa beans come together what ensues tantalizes the taste buds.

To the left of that little gem on their menu they have the Waffle combo that comes with either ice cream or strawberries, a 10 inch pepperoni pizza that they also sell in halves. The going rate one may ask? 26 kuai for a half. Tacked in between the pepperoni and waffles on the menu are Paninis. Sadly they haven't started selling them yet but it doesn't hurt to keep an eye out.

The Seating area and the bar are both upstairs. The room is serenaded by a mixture of jazz and blues hits. The exposed brick and hard wood counter top of the bar dominates the room. surrounded by couches and tables, giving off a relaxed and chilled out ambiance.

The bar offers Belgium and German beer with the exclusion of draught beer. They have an amazing (no I am not misusing it, trust me) cocktail menu. They strike the perfect balance of caffeine and alcohol with their signature cocktail, the Espresso martini. They are also the only bar I have walked into in Xi'an that has Egg Nog on their cocktail list. I know Christmas is in the rear view mirror but what about Easter? Easter Egg Nog sounds appealing. The cocktail and beer prices all range from 35-45 kuai.

Soundgarden

Article by Danny

I was recently having a conversation over beers that led to the topic of Soundgarden. I realized I hadn't thought about them for years which I thought was crazy because I used to love them! I then remembered that I'd heard rumors about a band reunion that I needed to examine immediately. Turns out they put out a record in 2010 (Telephantasm) that I had no idea about and another one in 2012 called King Animal. I was thrilled to see that they were indeed back together even if I am a little behind the times. Alright, WAY behind the times.

As soon as I started listening, I knew that I was listening to a classic Soundgarden record. The lineup of Chris Cornell on vocals, Matt Cameron on drums, the moody Ben Shepherd on bass and Kim Thayil on guitar is fantastic with a truly unique sound and feel. While there are some eclectic riffs that is a bit too mushy for me, most of the tracks are really appealing with a great variety in groove and spirit.

My favorite tracks on the album so far, and I've changed my mind a few times already, are Been Away Too Long – a no nonsense, classic Soundgarden rock and roll track; Non-State Actor – a great guitar & bass riff tune with singing that doesn't disappoint; Blood on the Valley Floor – reminiscent of Badmotorfinger times and style, and Attrition – a high energy, up tempo driving song. In truth there is more on this record that I like than I don't and the stuff I don't like is me being picky and not thinking that this band should have any emo sounding licks or effects, which, as a general rule, I'm not a fan of anyway.

Since high school Badmotorfinger and Superunknown were two of my favorite records. I couldn't be more pleased that I've found this record and the previously mentioned 2010 Telephantasm to spend time having eargasms to. This was one of those bands that struggled musically, business-wise and with their personnel and all of that comes through loud and clear in the music.

As far as listening to the music goes, I've said what I want to and would stand by it with the most prodigious of music enthusiasts who like to discuss the topic. I would only offer that I am humbly grateful for the opportunity to offer my thoughts on something so important to so many people.

Pro: It's Soundgarden back in proper form with a lot to love.

Con: It took me too damn long to remember how awesome they are and find new music to listen to.

Danny is an avid music fan and part time musician who has had the pleasure of playing in a few bands from time to time. There is no music I won't listen to at least once, except opera (both Beijing and Western). Have an album you want him to review?

FOPING AND

line meaning that instead of the three hours it now takes you will get there in 40 minutes...this will change the face of Foping both for the better and for the worse but let's let 2017 take care of itself and focus on Foping now, as it is and what it offers.

Right, Foping is in the midst of a great transition and while that can be either good or bad it also means that never before has the area been as accessible or travel friendly as it is right now. The Swiss Town Company is taking the lead in developing the area as the Yellowstone of China. They have already created a western styled Eco

As the season changes and the warm tendrils of spring and summer break apart the cold dark corners of winter more often than not we find ourselves infected with wander lust. It starts with deep breaths and short walks but ends with full on Google searches of "Top places to get away from it all". It's one of the best things about living in a city with 4 seasons... the cold and dread of winter makes you appreciate budding trees and warm sunny days more than anything and living in a place like Xi'an means that you are on the doorstep of adventures that even Google doesn't know about.

Foping, about three hour's southwest of Xi'an is to this day still a relatively isolated natural area that boasts the world's densest population of wild Pandas. Nestled in the Qinling Mountains the small city of Foping is the seat of the smallest county in Shaanxi yet filled with amazing potential for some great natural adventures.

As with many things in China development is on its way and in three years or so there will be a Foping stop on the Xi'an - Chengdu high speed rail lodge with clean and well-appointed dorm rooms and hotel rooms. Any trip out to Foping should be at least overnight, the drive time from Gaoxin is at least 3 hours making day trips a bit stressful. Never fear though the Eco lodge will take care of you serving up a modicum of western food, coffee and organic Chinese meals, this place is a perfect base from which to run your wilderness adventures.

family homes.

3) No project will falsely promote what it is not. The folks at Swiss Town are working hard and investing largely to create an area that is not only harmonic with the local environment but also one that resonates with visitors. There are no false claims or grand statements that glare with the truth. They don't just want people to come to Foping, they want people to come back again and again.

This hotel is just the beginning - they have several projects currently underway and in production all of which must adhere to three basic principles.

While large projects such as the Swiss Chalets, international cafes, bars and supermarkets are little more than roadside depictions at this point prior to the opening of the rail line all will be up and online. Again, we didn't go there to see pictures of what will be, we went there to see what you can do now.

1) No project must negatively impact the surrounding environment. The Foping area is abound in wildlife which Swiss Town wants to preserve and maintain.

2) No project will negatively affect the local population. While many of their plans are in scope they maintain a 0% relocation strategy. Meaning that when farm areas are reintroduced back to wild habitat the farmers are reeducated into ecological custodians of the area while still living in their

Artist Commune

About 15km away they converted an old school into an artist commune where you can study, work and live with local artists using the surrounding area as your inspiration. It's on the other side of the mountain away from the road and noise so it's a peaceful area with chirping birds and quiet conversations. If you're not an artist you can pop by for a cup of tea and poke around; they also offer daily trips to the river to pick up stones for painting. A few of the artists speak English so communication shouldn't be a problem.

Botanical Gardens Tea Ceremony

Just outside of the city are the botanical gardens lush and green with a collection of flowers, plants and trees from Foping County. It's not a large area but it is interesting for a bit of a walk around. They also offer a Chinese tea ceremony on the grounds using fresh tea from the southern Shaanxi city of Hanzhong. While most of us have sat through more than a few tea ceremonies in our time, the idea of sitting outside in a secluded area as the wind whispers through the trees and the shadows dance on the ground drinking fragrant tea is one ceremony not to be missed.

Panda Hike and Camping

If you're a bit more adventurous they offer a one day or two day one night hike into the experimental section of the Foping Panda Sanctuary. (The Panda sanctuary is divided into two parts: the habitat area which no one is allowed into and the experimental area which can be hiked through.) It's about a 7 hour hike that can be done in one day or broken up into two days with a night spent camping in the park. Keep in mind that while there are more pandas here than anywhere else in the world they are still elusive creatures and the chance of seeing one isn't great. Take the hike for what it is - a day or two in nature - and you won't be disappointed, heck you might even see a Panda!

Rice Picking and Organic Vegetables

A little ways from the town there are several organic rice paddies and farms where you can try your hand at planting and picking rice and other vegetables. If being a farmer on your day off isn't something you aspire to, you can also purchase their produce or take some amazing photographs of an idyllic Chinese countryside.

Foping, for the time being is an amazing place ready to be explored and experienced. It's blue sky, green trees, fresh breezes and abundant wildlife is a world away from the bustling Xi'an streets. While its relatively easy to get to it's still off the radar for most folks making a day or two in the wilds of Qingling one of the truly unique places to get away from it all.

MY MUM IN CHINA

Article by Carolyn

Allow me to digress from my tales of the Miao village and bring you abruptly up to the present. Last Sunday, after staying with us for 2 months, my 88 year old mother flew back to England. I can hardly believe that she's gone or even for that matter that she came at all. As numerous casual passers by pointed out, it's unusual for people of her age to venture into the street let alone cross continents for a first time taste of a new country. My mother certainly allowed herself to experience the new, the alarming and the unpredictable. Transport alone was a challenge and she approached it with spirit allowing herself to be squashed with her wheelchair and me into raggedy, rickety

3 wheel wagons. It's easy to ignore the alarm factor of Xi'an traffic when you've lived with it for a while but it really was quite a different experience to anything she'd come across in the west. "Oh my god! Jesus look out! Ahhhh!" my mum would shriek as impatient saloons with blacked out windows skinned past with horns blaring while buses, bicycles, taxis, pedestrians and stray dogs all milled at high or daringly slow speed around us as we thumped and bumped and hooted our own way through the mix. "If you can't bear it close your eyes mother!" "I'm too frightened to close my eyes!" she'd wail and we'd both laugh. My mum's ability to laugh under pressure is one of so many things I love about her.

We had such a busy time. I tried to make every day memorable and happy and for the most part I succeeded, correction: China succeeded; I just steered her in different directions. The warmth and spontaneous generosity of the Chinese people won her heart. We went everywhere, met everyone and saw everything but the day before she left Xi'an there was one thing I'd wanted her to try that she hadn't. I hadn't suggested it because she's really quite frail now but the weather on our last day was so lovely and warm and sunny and standing in the street unable yet again to find a normal taxi I suddenly decided that now was the time for her ride on a motor bike. She'd had such pleasure riding bikes with my father when she was younger and all I could think was that this was probably the last time in her life she'd ever have the chance again. "How about a ride on this chap's motorbike mum, do you think you could get up?" "Oh, Carolyn, goodness, well yes I think

I probably could if you helped me". The next moment there she was astride the bike, "wrap your arms round his waist," I directed, hopped up behind and off we went. What a thrill it was sailing along the road with her sandwiched between the driver and me, she was so very happy right up until the moment we were arrested and even then she held her nerve while I castigated the police for pulling 2 foreigners out of so many Chinese offenders and a crowd of 60 gathered so quickly they almost lifted my mum off her feet.

All good for the heart!

Every day she faced new challenges, engaged enthusiastically with new people and almost never grumbled. The day I pushed her round Lou Guan Tai in freezing drizzle was an exception but in retrospect I concede I was more focussed on the statue of Chuang Tzu dreaming he was a butterfly than her. She was so grateful and merry when I finally realised she wasn't just being cantankerous and hurriedly wheeled her into the gift shop where the assistants gave me disapproving sideways glances and fluttered round her with biscuits and cups of hot water.

She negotiated all the squat loos and pavement hoiking without complaint, made do without classic fm, The Daily Mail, proper toast, double cream or National Lottery tickets. I'm sure in time she'd have found her place with the ma jong ladies on their tables outside our apartment but unfortunately that will have to wait for another life. All in all she was a wonderful traveller and I will remember her visit with joy.

I'm not sure I've ever met anyone who unconditionally accepts an aged parent without resentment of one form or another. It sort of goes with the territory doesn't it? While she was here I secretly started a note book of do's and don'ts which I intend to consult every day should I be lucky enough to live to be aged myself. Amongst other things I'm going to buy the best hearing aid I can afford, wear shoes with silent cloth soles, never mention sex with any of my previous partners, cultivate stillness, passively permit my daughter to make major decisions for me (yipes), carry a small bag containing nothing but some paracetamol and a diverting book, never tell anyone how old I am and never mention my health on the last point my mum actually did brilliantly. When she arrived I told her in China it's considered bad luck to talk about physical discomfort, accidents or ill health and the Chinese believe the very mention of such things brings fearful bad fortune to both teller and listener. My ploy worked brilliantly and she barely reflected on the numbing pain of age. How heartless able bodied, vigorous relatives are!

COMMUNITY MARKET

Basically it's a farmers market idea but with less farmers (because we don't know any foreign farmers - yet). It's open to anyone and everyone, but no companies please, this is only for individuals. Our hope is that once we get enough people selling their own items we will then be able to hold an actual monthly Community Market someplace in the city.

I hope we can get some great homemade stuff into the community and bring us all closer together.

“ A girl
 The color of lilacs,
 The fragrance of lilacs,
 The worries of lilacs,
 Feeling melancholy in the rain,
 Plaintive and hesitating.

 Silently she comes closer,
 Closer, giving me
 A glance like a sigh;
 Then she floats past
 Like a dream,
 Dreary and blank like a dream.

A girl, the color of lilac

Article by Kristen Zhou

Like a lilac
 Floating past in a dream,
 the girl floats past me;
 Silently she goes further and further,
 To the crumbling wall,
 Out of the lane in the rain. “

Perhaps only flowers can inspire poets to create such fragrant poetry. Giving normal people a shared aesthetic of a beautiful flower blossom not only pleases our visual sense but also infuses us with a remembered aromatic fragrance held deep within our heart. The best way to enjoy a beautiful memory is to share it with someone you feel close to making them part of the memory forever.

Today, more and more people are feeling threatened by environmental conditions and begin to realize how precious the simple experience of blue sky days, white clouds and colorful natural surroundings. Unfortunately for people shuttling back and forth among monolithic high-rise buildings and small apartments in a big city like you and I, rarely do we see even a few trees not to mention a sea of flowers. Lately I have begun to buy bundles of peonies, roses or anything I can get from flower shops in the city, though I know it is limited but these colorful and sweet scented flowers calm me from the hustle and bustle of my daily life.

In line with getting into nature Jo Malone (a Luxury British brand) has gathered quite a following through their distinguished scents and delicate elegant packaging. The Jo Malone colognes are about simplicity and purity – focusing on the fragrance of flowers, spices and woods, like a soft wind blowing through the forest. It is these multiple choices of colognes that lend itself to a higher class impression, making it easy to separate you from others who only use widely known perfume brands.

From Lime Basil and Mandarin, Earl Grey and Cucumber, English Pear and Freesia, Nectarine Blossom and Honey to White Jasmine and Mint, (just to name a few of their fragrances) it would be almost impossible to say there isn't one that you like or that you could encounter someone else wearing the same scent as you.

These flowery names carry more scents than what the name implies. The earliest and classic Jo Malone cologne Lime Basil and Mandarin includes top notes of Mandarin, Lime, Grapefruit, Bergamot and Orange while the middle notes are Basil, White Thyme, Lilac and Iris finishing off with bottom tones of Amber Wood, Pogostemon Cablin, Vetiver and Costus oil. If that list seems extensive and expressive it should; it's this multilayer of fragrance that still maintains a low profile aroma that is favored by people with artistic tastes, that care about quality of life and look for the origin of beauty.

Every day I throw open the curtains and see a cloudy grey day I simply spray on Jo Malone and almost instantly I see a field of flowers, I see ripe fruit hanging from trees and all day I walk around with my own secret garden.

Kids

Article by Benjiman Grutner

Community

It seems that as I get further into my career with children, I discover more and more ‘child-wonders’ in my life. I currently tutor a 10-year old Chinese girl (Kitty) here in Xi’an who is by far the most talented kid I’ve ever met. I don’t tutor her in English like the rest of my students, but in essay and poetry-writing. Yeah. This girl is pretty much as good a natural poet as any peers I’d seen all my time in college (I majored in one of the U.S.’s top creative writing programs). She also speaks French and Spanish, apparently based solely on her habit of watching cartoons in those relative languages. No joke.

Her last essay, on her love of reading, featured her three favorite places to read: in bed upon waking up; on the balcony in the sunlight; and on the toilet for long periods of time even after she’d finished her business. After a few cracks about bringing a “good one” to the bathroom (referring to a book but alluding to a dookie) she concluded that despite overcoming the ‘perfume’ of number two’s, she loves nothing more than “bathing...in the springs of knowledge, wisdom, and art.” The wonders of a child’s curiosity and creativity are amazing.

Kitty is only the first of two child prodigies that I have come to know here, however. The second is an 9-year old boy named, endearingly, Free. While Kitty would love nothing better than to sit and discuss new concepts for jokes, humor, or poetry for an entire afternoon, Free would rather play golf (which we’ve once spent several straight hours doing on one of his common driving ranges) or building crazy paper airplanes from designs he’s discovered online. Typical boy behavior, some might presume, but this kid is anything but typical. He is studying in England this semester, and in any case, he’s already landed open invitations to Harvard and Stanford by their respective deans after rocking out China’s national English competition last year. And, I should mention, his piano tutor is none other than the world-famous (perhaps currently the world’s most famous) pianist, Langlang.

For those two, it’s easy to see just how amazing this next generation should be. But it wasn’t until a couple months ago that the real revelation hit me. Back in the states, my two nieces, Lily and Piper, are epitomes of natural beauty and innate curiosity. My eldest niece, Lily, has surpassed the expectations of most in almost every academic subject, but none by so great a margin than that of respectfulness.

Her professional courtesies, however, can only hide her true feelings so well. Last month, during a visit home, she’d asked me to share some of my discoveries with her private elementary. Her younger sister, who’d just started pre-K thought it a terribly unbalanced world wherein in one sister should get her uncle to come to her class at school while the other, even if her class was only half as long and at the YMCA, would be neglected. So of course I made the same offer to her class as well.

Well, as it turns out, Lily’s teacher was suspicious of what I would share, and, after a disheartening conversation with Lily, sent her home with a ‘maybe’ and a bunch of red-tape and volunteer applications telling her I could apply. I only had a few days with them, so this would be impossible. The Y, on the other hand, was more than happy to have their famous camp counselor return with goods from his international explorations. In the end, I would present for Piper’s class, rather than Lily’s.

The morning before my presentation, Lily approached me while I was packing my things.

“What are you gonna say?”

I was caught off-guard, in my early morning fuzziness; “about what?”

“I mean at Piper’s class?”

“Oh, yeah, I don’t know, I guess I’ll show them the pictures and teach them some Chinese numbers, you know, one, two, three or something. I don’t know.”

I was cranky and tired, and so at first was too preoccupied to notice the disappointed ‘oh...’ that slipped out of Lily’s mouth as she looked down at her little feet. She was obviously caught up in a sort of grief that an excited child must experience when something they have been secretly expecting and telling their friends about for months slips away without good reason.

After she shuffled away, it hit me. She wanted to know what her sister would get to see, that she wouldn't. She wanted to know what, exactly, she was missing despite all her best efforts. And my lack of attention drove the knife all the deeper.

That day, after many long, haunting hours, I picked her up from school and had a Lily-Ben date; no mom, no Piper, no one but us two. We spent hours walking the mall and talking about life. I learned that I owed her so much. Not because I made a mistake. Not because I let her down. Not because I had neglected a sensitive wound, but because she gave me all the love in the world, all the affection and thoughtfulness a little being can muster, and she expected nothing in return. A child's love, she taught me.

That moment of revelation that I'd unknowingly hurt my niece so deeply has been eating at me ever since. So this semester, I started paying more attention to the individual kids. This is what I've found so far:

One student at the school laughs every single time she looks at me, and says 'see yuh later' when she says her farewell to others, even the Chinese teachers, in imitation of me.

Another runs up and hugs me as tight as he can and begins jabbering on and on in Chinese, despite my not understanding, until he is torn away to begin his class.

Another always raises her hand in class to answer questions, even if she doesn't know the answers, in a desperate attempt to let me know she wants to know, she wants to be smart, and she wants to be there when all the other kids would rather be out at play.

Another draws pictures every week to give me, because, as I recall, once last semester I'd told her in my terrible Chinese "feichenghaohua!" while she was working on a picture for class.

Another student gives me the worst attitude in classes, a cocky, antagonistic 'I don't need this' kind of thing. It is a struggle every week. But every morning when he comes into the school, he seeks me out and approaches me first thing, and offers me the biggest smile and a bite of whatever he is munching on. Last week he offered me one of his earbuds so we could listen to music together. We did.

So now I realize, the more time I spend with individual children, paying them deserved, singled-out attention outside the classes or age-groups by which they are almost always defined and limited to, that, perhaps, every child is a prodigy. Every child has a surprise for the aged and experienced that we overlook every day. Every child stands out.

We just have to look closer.
